

Achieving rapid user adoption in a complex global CRM implementation

With more than 700 consultants operating in over 35 countries, award-winning Expense Reduction Analysts (ERA) boasts international expertise while simultaneously offering a local presence to clients.

Through in-depth industry knowledge and insight across a variety of expense categories, ERA adds value to organizations by advising on industry-specific best practices, reducing costs, and ultimately delivering tailored solutions to benefit business health and growth.

Keeping track of customers in so many sectors and countries means a very complicated customer engagement strategy, and ERA has adopted Microsoft Dynamics 365 to meet its CRM needs. Working with the UK-based CRM implementation specialists at QGate, the firm's management understood the challenges of deploying a new CRM internationally. To ensure user adoption in its franchises around the world, the team implemented a multilingual, scalable CRM onboarding training and custom help portal, using the ClickLearn e-learning authoring platform.

SUPPORTING A NEW CRM SYSTEM

"Microsoft Dynamics can take quite a bit of development," says Klaus Jeschke, Global Chief Operating Officer at ERA. Over the course of nine months, his team has worked closely with QGate professionals on new development and data migration from their previous CRM provider. The effort has translated into an improved solution with noticeable differences. But that new and improved CRM only delivers value if it is properly utilized. The team knew that delivering training across industries and geographies could be challenging – and it could be expensive.

“Many of our franchises may not have all the skills they need for working with Dynamics. They need the extra assistance and a way to be shown how to perform these new tasks.”

David de la Nougerede, Global head of IT at Expense Reduction Analysts
